Mental health (MH) and substance use disorder (SUD) services often function in parallel rather than in partnership, leading to fragmented care for youth and adults with co-occurring conditions. This training is designed to bridge that gap by promoting collaboration between MH and SUD providers; across all levels of care—including outpatient, inpatient, and residential treatment facilities (RTFs). Participants will explore integrated care models, gain practical strategies for addressing co-occurring disorders, and acquire tools to enhance cross-disciplinary communication and coordination. By breaking down systemic silos, we aim to foster a more cohesive, person-centered system of care, across all levels of care with the collaboration of RTF providers.

Learning Objectives:

- Recognize the importance of integrated care for youth and adults with co-occurring MH and SUD conditions
  - Identify key indicators and screening tools for co-occurring disorders applicable in outpatient, inpatient, and residential settings
  - Apply practical strategies for MH providers to address SUD within their professional scope
  - Develop shared treatment goals that align with both MH and SUD recovery pathways, ensuring continuity across care transitions
  - Utilize hands-on tools and resources to support integrated care in everyday practice with attention to coordination between residential and community-based services
