

Collaborative Assessment and Management of Suicidality (CAMS) Virtual Lunch & Learn Sessions on May 29 and June 5

Hosted by: Magellan Behavioral Health of Pennsylvania
Led by: Kevin Crowley, Ph.D. of CAMS Care

This one-hour virtual educational session provides a high-level introduction to the Collaborative Assessment and Management of Suicidality (CAMS). The session is designed to support community-wide understanding of suicide-specific care, not clinician certification. No CEs are offered.

Participants will learn:

- Why suicide-specific treatment is important
- How CAMS differs from traditional risk assessment
- How CAMS can be used across systems of care

“CAMS care has helped me build more confidence in addressing a client with a suicide risk. I feel I am able to engage with clients more and relate to them with an empathetic manner. I am hopeful by using this I will see more positive outcomes with my clients!” – CAMS-Trained Clinician

Who Should Attend:

This session is open to anyone interested in suicide prevention and suicide-specific care, including:

Behavioral health providers (Magellan and non-Magellan)
County administrators and staff
Educators and school-based professionals
Community-based organizations
Healthcare, social services, and human service professionals

No certification or contract is required to attend. For busy professionals, we are offering two opportunities. Sessions will also be recorded for later viewing.
